

In university, I am taking Business Administration and planning to major in Human Resources. I have been actively involved with the University of Regina with volunteering, clubs, and working.

While working as a lifeguard/swim instructor at the UofR pool since 2014, I have been actively a part of clubs and organizations. I volunteered with the Ambassador program, which has shown me a variety of activities that the university has to offer. I have been on the UR Improv team, done recreational volleyball, and participated in several university ran events.

After being an executive member for the Hill HR club where I learned team playing and leadership skills, I founded and became president of the Hill Marketing Club. Through this club, I learned managerial skills and the fundamentals of running a club. I learned how to build connections with faculty, staff, students, and the community. This club has helped me enrich the skills that I have learned through my university and professional career.

This school year I got elected to be on the board of directors for the UR Pride centre. With this role, I gained experience in seeing how a board of directors runs and working with other directors to help provide what is best for the business and students as a whole.

My passion is to create a safe space for students and making sure everyone has an enjoyable university experience. I also love seeing other people succeed and get the most out of everything they do.
